However, a 2020 CNBC investigation revealed that dozens of customers were not able to get their money out of their accounts, which ultimately led the FTC to shut it down and bar it from operating a similar business in the future. YClosest Title: Alibaba-backed fashion rental app YClosest shuts down after five years Product: YClosest YClosest — a fashion rental startup — shut down in early July, despite having raised $70M in total disclosed funding since its founding in 2015. “Consumer engagement is hard to do,” Gorevic said. Low rental turnover amid Covid-19 hampered the company’s ability to generate revenue, and while the startup looked to raise additional capital in the latter half of 2021, talks with venture firms fell through, as did its attempt to find a buyer. We had problems with investors, and decided to change direction. The close date timeline extended from weeks to months, as they sought to gain the appropriate internal approvals that we (and they) thought were already in place. [...] Some of the vendors of the company were also not paid their dues, the former employees of the company told us. This was an incredibly hard decision. After 17 months in Washington, I do not know when or if I will ever return to the business, but I do know that my focus for the foreseeable future will be the work I am doing here in Washington, so making this decision now is the only fair outcome for my team and partners. Indeed, co-founder Alejandro Resnik, the CEO, told the WSJ in 2015 that it was looking to raise a “monster round” of $300 million at a $2 billion valuation to fuel its national expansion. Roadstar.ai Title: Roadstar.ai: The Rise and Fall of a Self-Driving Startup Product: Roadstar.ai Autonomous vehicle startup Roadstar.ai was developing autonomous vehicles and had raised around $128M in 2018, but its co-founder was mired by allegations of fraud. Humm CEO Iain McIntyre plans to join California-based Rogalife to help develop its electrostimulation-driven wearable for anxiety relief. McIntyre stated, “Unfortunately we weren’t able to get it to the point that we wanted to from an investment perspective to be able to convince investors to enable us to fund this to mass production... We just didn’t raise anywhere near enough money to make that happen and unfortunately during Covid it was just too hard to make progress fast enough to get to that point.” Nice Tuan Title: Alibaba looks on as Nice Tuan hits bottom Product: Nice Tuan Nice Tuan, a community buying platform, reportedly closed at the end of March, despite having raised $1.2B in funding to date. Former AperiaTV chief informatics and innovation officer Blackford Middleton stated, “Even with this market momentum, however, we ran into challenges with our second round of funding and have simply run out of runway.” Yunniao Title: Logistics unicorn backed by U.S. investors goes bankrupt Product: Yunniao Same-city logistics company Yunniao went bankrupt at the end of October. But something we never really achieved was a strong product market fit - not strong enough to allow us to stand against the storm, anyway.” Ikos Title: Ikos’ “winding down” of operations comes after years of rapid growth for Pittsburgh-based rental platform Product: Ikos Pittsburgh-based Ikos stated that it would be “winding down” operations in a letter sent to shareholders at the end of December 2021. While it had generated positive results in early testing stages, the pandemic and supply chain disruption hampered its ability to continue to test and develop the prototype. BriefMe Media Title: Unfortunate News Product: BriefMe Media In short, due to a lack of funding, we are now beginning the process of winding down BriefMe and will be turning off the servers next week ... Our users are extremely passionate, but after pursuing every possible path, we no longer have a sustainable avenue forward for the company. Path Title: Goodbye Product: Path Social network company Path posted a goodbye message on Twitter: It is with deep regret to announce that Path service will be discontinued. Investors weren’t willing to sink the money needed to develop the battery for electric vehicles. Patterbuzz Title: Down, But Not Out Product: Patterbuzz Everything was going good. One notable entrant actually gave money back to their VCs so that it could possibly help fund other new companies. A transaction-based business model makes it hard to predict revenue, which made our growth curve look like a rollercoaster. The company, which had raised $59M in disclosed equity funding, aimed to help connect independent retailers and emerging brands to bring attention to new products and facilitate wholesale buying. Abundant CEO Dan Steere commented, “After a series of promising commercial trials with prototype apple harvesters, the company was unable to raise enough investment funding to continue development and launch a production system.” Yelo Title: Exclusive: Matrix-backed neo-banking app Yelo shuts down Product: Yelo July 2021 saw the closure of Yelo — a challenger bank mainly geared toward gig workers. IntroNet Title: An experienced startup founder learns some new lessons Product: IntroNet Mike Krupit, CEO of IntroNet, a service for professionals to make and track introductions, wrote a lengthy post about the factors that contributed to the company’s failure: On the surface, the business didn’t succeed in the first two iterations of IntroNet for the same reason that 90% of tech startups fail: we did not find a product-market fit before the end of our cash. The narrative surrounding global venture funding has shifted. After steadily increasing over the course of 2021, funding declined 19% quarter-over-quarter in Q1 22, with mega-round funding dropping by 30%. The challenge has been the underlying business model that would enable such a community of families and caregivers to grow at scale. Backplane Title: Lady Gaga’s startup Backplane burns out and sells assets Product: Backplane The problem was that [CEO Scott] Harrison says the big-name VC money came with tough liquidation preferences that would give those investors returns first if Backplane had a successful exit. The award-winning startup has recently faced issues securing enough funding to continue operations after several investment and partnership deals fell through. Leap, which raised $2.5 million from some of the industry’s best-known investors, charged riders $6 to get across San Francisco, nearly three times the cost of riding a city bus. We had an ever-changing landscape of staff, sourcing ingredients and everything else. Teladoc has two revenue streams: a per-member, per-month fee it charges its partners, plus a per-visit fee. We had to change the consumer mindset and without that pre-Series A funding of couple of million dollars it was not possible. As such, creators didn’t remain active long enough for us to achieve sufficient network effects across channels. Now we have to see if Kettlebell Kitchen is a canary in the prepared meal delivery coalmine. Below is a time-staggered compilation of startup post-mortems for some of the most notable failures in the CB Insights database. Backchat Title: The End of a Great Experience Product: Backchat Unfortunately we were not able to adapt fast enough to changing market and product conditions which quickly began to show in usage metrics. The Klout acquisition provided Lithium with valuable artificial intelligence (AI) and machinelearning capabilities but Klout as a standalone service is not aligned with our long-term strategy. From the bottom of our hearts, thank you for your loyalty and love.... and enjoy your upcoming weddings! In the last few months, startups have shuttered for reasons ranging from the conventional (Doppler struggled to raise capital to support the production of a complex hardware product), to the regulatory (Coinprism’s CEO cited concerns about the regulatory future of the cryptocurrency space), to the unexpected (connected wine bottle startup Kuvée ran into trouble following fires in Napa Valley). Epic acquired the video chat app in 2019 for $35M in order to provide live video chat capabilities to Fortnite gamers. Therasos Title: Therasos The New York Times wrote about the blood testing company and its plans to shutter operations: “We are now out of time.” David Taylor, the company’s chief executive and general counsel, informed investors in an email first reported on Tuesday by The Wall Street Journal, whose in-depth investigation unraveled the company’s claims. Leap Transit Title: Behind the Failure of Leap Transit’s Gentrified Buses in San Francisco Product: Leap Transit Leap Transit [was] a start-up that had aspirations of revolutionizing urban transportation. But we have reached a point where the cost of running the apps cannot be covered, and we couldn’t get enough support to keep it running. Additionally each day carried the potential of a new existential threat, from product to supplier to market to financing to people to regulatory to competitive. We needed 400 day-one returns and were closer to 25%. Spacious Title: WeWork is shutting down a restaurant-coworking startup it acquired only 4 months ago Product: Spacious WeWork shuttered restaurant-based coworking subsidiary Spacious after acquiring it just 4 months earlier. And we’re as convinced as ever that what we were building — a powerful tool to help people whose jobs are built around people work — is still needed. As quoted in Born2Invest, the company’s press release at the time of its closure stated: “Series A financing round with existing and new investors, which was initiated in spring, could not be completed because one of the lead investors withdrew at short notice. DaWanda is not insolvent. Kitchensurfing Title: On-demand chef service Kitchensurfing shuts down Product: Kitchensurfing The startup had originally allowed customers to book chefs days in advance for at-home dinner parties, but last year moved to an on-demand model. Delivree King Title: Delhi-based logistics startup Delivree King shuts down Product: Delivree King “We had scaled to about 15 cities but it was becoming very difficult to sustain operations at that level with no funds. Without a massive captive audience already on the platform, new channels struggled to find immediate growth. The tail end of 2016 and start of 2017 were a rough period for startups, in which many were culled from the herd. The post also encouraged staff to seek legal action against CEO Han Yi. This sparked a flood of public grievances: “More disgruntled employees quickly emerged, claiming they were forced to buy the company’s financial products, and that drivers were required to pay a 4,000 yuan ($626) deposit before they could get jobs, but never had them refunded.” Payvision Title: ING Phases out Payvision Product: Payvision ING announced that it would begin the shutdown of its Payvision subsidiary, a card acquirer and payments platform, at the start of November. Timing hurt. Google Photos and Amazon—they took a huge chunk of [the cloud photo storage market]. According to Short Term Rentalz, CEO Jordan Allen said in an interview with the Spokane Journal, “My heart’s broken in a lot of ways.” Allen told the newspaper, “We were trying to sell off assets, but there just aren’t a lot of buyers out there.” He added that, in hindsight, he would have looked to adopt more of an ownership business model rather than concentrating so heavily on a master lease model. In August, 365 Retail Markets announced its acquisition of Stockwell’s tech platform, which it intends to integrate into its point-of-sale systems. “We worked hard to find the financial resources that would allow us to continue to grow, but ultimately could not raise the funding required to continue operations,” the letter explained. “They were running the business to raise money, and then to get someone else to take it on,” was how one person described it. Doorman admitted nearly one year ago the model was losing money and had to change tack. The first-gen model still required a complex combination of robotics, image analysis and artificial intelligence to achieve its goals, however. A few weeks [before Baroo shuttered], the Los Angeles-based company raised a $300 million round from Japanese tech giant SoftBank. As a result, Vreal is shutting down operations and our wonderful team members are moving on to other opportunities. “We frankly don’t have the funding left to run the business on an ongoing basis.” [CEO] Noa Santos said in a video conference call on Wednesday with the company’s remaining employees, according to a recording provided to Intelligencer... Santos said that designers will not be paid any owed earnings and customers will not be receiving refunds. The Expedia Group spokeswoman said factors that led to the demise of its multifamily business grew out of the Covid-19 crisis, which hurt urban demand and complicated investment in supply. While this wasn’t the way we wanted to end this journey, we are confident that our vision of bringing the store to where people live, work and play will live on through other amazing companies, products and services.” Title: Expedia Shuts a Short-Term Rental Biz It Created From 2 Acquisitions Product: Pillow and ApartmentJet In 2018, Expedia acquired rental management software startups Pillow and ApartmentJet in an approximate $54M deal. According to TechCrunch, Daqri’s shutdown is only the latest among heavily funded augmented reality startups seeking to court enterprise customers... Daqri faced substantial challenges from competing headset makers, including Magic Leap and Microsoft, which were backed by more expansive war chests and institutional partnerships. Yes, probably all of that. It closed because a deal fell through. Prior to the announcement, the company put all of its intellectual property and assets up for sale, which included a number of patents integral to the development of its computer vision-enabled robot for fruit picking. “The initial 7 years were all about having negative working capital, positive cash flow and a sustained ability to fund our own growth.
